SUMMER LIVING

TODAY'S cover girl is more used to being behind the camera than in front of it – as one of the country's leading make-up artists she gives celebrities and models their flawless, glamorous look.

Sarah Brock juggles her life as a mum of two young boys with her high-flying career. Newly promoted by famed make-up artist Daniel Sander as his artistic director, the 34-year-old is at the top of her game, working with a team of 20 artists. As well as her work with Daniel, who recently did the make-up for Geri Halliwell's baby's christening, she also operates from a studio in Calne, specialising in bridal work but also with a packed diary for other special occasions, such as school proms, and giving make-up lessons. In fact, she candidly admits, that's where her talent really comes to bear. "Doing the local stuff, that's when you need to be really, really good. With top, top celebrities the airbrush will often do a lot of the work for you." While she was still a teenager, Sarah did a bit of modelling, which is when she began to learn about make-up. But it was not until her sons were born and she decided she wanted a job that would fit with the demands of family life, that she studied from home, eventually earning herself three diplomas in make-up artistry. She then spent a year working for Space NK in
